Message From Your President

Hello Wisconsin Angus,

We are coming off of a busy summer show schedule and working into fall. Most of the state has seen timely rains this summer to help pastures rebound and it appears feed will be abundant this fall and winter. Everyone will soon be busy weaning calves and processing their herds.

Once again this year Wisconsin Angus Assoc. worked a shift in the Wisconsin Cattleman's steak trailer at the state fair. The weather was a little wet but we were busy between rain storms and I would like to thank everyone that volunteered their time. We had an excellent turn out and I will not name them for fear of forgetting someone Thank You!

Be sure to put on your schedule to attend the World Beef Expo September 23 thru 25 in West Allis. Also there will be a number of fall production sales, a dispersal and online sales throughout Wisconsin, be sure to support your fellow WAA members and take advantage of the world class genetics there is to offer within our state.

Please be planning now for your advertising needs for the state directory as it will go to press early this winter to be ready for Denver. If you did not purchase an ad at the annual meeting contact Justin Diefenbach or myself for you ad needs.

Stay safe this fall and god bless,

Jeff Berget,

Angus Display Meets With Favor At Farm Tech Days

Wisconsin Farm Technology Days were held at Snudden Farms in the Town of Zenda, Walworth County on July 19 to 21. Once again Wisconsin Angus had a booth in the Wisconsin Cattleman's Tent. Thanks go out to Lone Oaks Angus, Dustin Henningfield for supplying the display cow calf pair this year.

Even though it seemed show attendance was down this year with the extreme heat and threats for severe weather, there was good traffic for the Angus booth and a good amount of literature and directories were handed out. The WAA booth was manned by volunteers all three days by Jack Cummings, Mel and Sharon Niemann, Jeff Berget, Doc Bill Hilleman and Cody Quam. Thank You to all our volunteers. It is very important that we have member breeders there to answer questions and put a face to our segment of the ag industry. All of the 'niche' or novelty breeds represented at the Cattleman's Tent had breeders there during the show, so it is great that the Angus breed had breeders on hand to tell the story of the advantages of the Angus.

Along with state breed association representatives, there were farms, sales coop's and state ag agencies with booths. As always the Beef Council and their ever popular chefs were cooking and doing beef demonstrations. They were on hand for several daily presentations. Adding to the excitement were the two a day auction competitions put on by the Wisconsin Auctioneers Association.

Wisconsin Angus Auxiliary

Greetings from the Auxiliary – Leslie Mindemann, President

The Auxiliary has fall events lined up. I would first like to invite you to attend the WI Angus Auxiliary annual meeting on Saturday, September 24th during World Beef Expo. We will provide a light lunch prior to the 12:30 meeting with door prizes for attendees.

Elections will be held for all officer positions. If you are interested in serving as Secretary/Treasurer, Vice President/Scholarship Chair, or President please contact Renee Radcliffe, Nominating Chair, 715-359-3218 or srangus3115@frontier.com. Find us near the Coliseum. Bring a chair and a friend.

Also during World Beef Expo, the Auxiliary will host the first "Shoot the Bull" event, inviting women from all breeds for social networking. Beverages and samples of our gift box offering will be available along with Angus brisket, cooked with Jim Murray's new line of smoking grills. The event will include demonstration of Murray Equipment's livestock chutes on features and operation. The Auxiliary will hold a Bucket Raffle, offer etched wine glasses for a "donation", and door prizes for attendees.

The juniors had a very successful National Junior Angus Show in Grand Island, NE. I was privileged to attend the Queen's Luncheon at the Crane Trust Nature Center with our Queen Bree Gaffney and Ambassadors Grace Link, Jaci Williams, and Claire Hawthorne. An energetic speaker along with a nice meal, gifts and prizes for all made it a fun event. Bree enjoyed assisting Miss American Angus in the ring with ribbons and awards.

It's not too early to be thinking about scholarship applications and preparing your "resume". The CAB Colvin Scholarship offered by Certified Angus Beef is due in December. Offering six scholarships to collegiate juniors and seniors and one for full-time Masters or Doctorate students. The Wisconsin Angus Auxiliary scholarship applications, open to graduating high school seniors and continuing education following one year of completed study, are due January 15, 2017.

NJAS Bronze and Silver awards are highly valued on your resume and a requirement for those competing in the American Angus Auxiliary scholarship contest. Record keeping is the biggest deterrent in the application process so it does pay off to start early. If you are interested in information or a spreadsheet developed just for that purpose just contact me. I also have a compiled list of scholarship opportunities with contacts and deadlines to support HS seniors and continuing education.

Christmas is right around the corner and the Auxiliary has the perfect gift for that hard to buy person. Angus Cheddar Cheese and CAB Sausage highlight our gift boxes along with a variety of Wisconsin products. Purchase one of three designed boxes for friends, family, or customers, create your own, or add one or more items to your holiday goodie basket. Watch for our November email or look to the Auxiliary page on the website for items available and order form – Due December 1st.

If you're not a member already come join us. The mission of the Auxiliary is to support Wisconsin Angus Breeders and our youth through programs that compliment and stretch the goals of the organizations. Dues are $5 annually or $25 for a life membership. Contact Val Gaffney, gfc@tds.net or 608-924-1029 or download the membership form from our website.

Greetings Everyone,

It is hard to believe the summer is almost over.

The Wisconsin Juniors had another successful Junior National Angus Show and Wisconsin State Fair!

"Stampede the Sandhills" was this year's theme for Junior Nationals.

I would like to thank everyone who helped the Wisconsin Juniors make it a successful trip.

Juniors who participated at the NJAS this year were: Emma Hermsdorf, Kollin Huth, Jack, Clara, and Sam Henderson, Allison and Claire Hawthorne, Sam Hilleshiem, Paige, Kelly, Ty, and Bree Gaffney, Heidi and Hannah Tremaine, Even Henning, Hailey Jentz, Derek and Dylan Horstmeyer, Grace Link, Jaci Williams, Brooke Davis, Kole and Klay Lorentz, Kelby and Collin Petersen, and Anna Tolle.

~Quiz Bowl was well represented with two intermediate teams, one junior team and one senior team; Congratulations to all participants.

~As always Wisconsin was well represented in the Team Fitting competition; congratulations to Derek Horstmeyer, Kole and Klay Lorentz, and Kollin Huth.

~Derek Horstmeyer represented Wisconsin well in the showmanship competition, congratulations on a great final year.

~Wisconsin was honored to be awarded the Herdsmanship award for the 16-50 head Category. Thank you to Allison Hawthorne for designing the new signs and banner for the state display.

~Many Wisconsin Juniors also participated in the Judging and Photography contests as well as Speaking and Writing contests.

Congratulations to all the Wisconsin Juniors, great job representing Wisconsin this year!

The Wisconsin and Illinois Juniors will be "Living the Dream in 2018" for the cohosted NJAS in Madison, WI. The Wisconsin Junior Chairs are in the planning stages with their Illinois counterparts, under the guidance of Junior Executive Director Paige Gaffney. If there are any questions please feel free to contact Paige or myself.

Look for updates on the Wisconsin Junior Angus Association's Facebook page and through E-Mail.

*Sincerely,
Claire Hawthorne, WJAA President*

Getting Newly Weaned or Received Calves Started on Feed

Article courtesy of Dr. Brandi Karisch, Mississippi State University

A goal of any receiving or weaning plan should be to minimize stress on newly received calves. Starting new cattle, whether they be newly weaned or freshly received into a stocker operation, can often be a challenge. A goal of any receiving or weaning plan should be to get calves started on feed quickly and eating well. Management of their diets can have long term impacts on performance.

The receiving phase offers unique nutritional challenges as compared to other phases of a calf's life. Proper nutritional management during this phase is critical to ensuring success and profitability. These calves are often stressed upon arrival or after weaning, and will likely have low feed and water intake for several days. Some calves may even be naïve to feed, hay, or even water troughs, and calves should be carefully observed during this time. Due to their often low feed intake, receiving diets should be formulated to be highly palatable, stimulate intake, and provide a more concentrated source of key nutrients.

Some guidelines to follow include:

1. Provide access to clean fresh water: Water is an essential nutrient, and should be readily accessible. Be sure that water troughs are free of mold and algae growth. Consider the fact that calves may be accustomed to drinking from ponds or streams, and may not immediately recognize an automatic waterer.

2. Provide access to free choice hay: Calves will likely be able to easily recognize and consume hay. They should have access to good quality grass hay to stimulate proper rumen function.

3. Provide palatable feed with greater concentrations of nutrients: On average, feed intake of newly received calves is low. Because of this, diets for calves starting on feed should be formulated both to maximize intake and provide greater concentrations of required nutrients. Receiving diets must be highly palatable, stimulate intake, provide acceptable levels of critical nutrients, and minimize the potential for nutritional disorders. Generally, receiving diets containing more than 55 percent concentrate can lead to digestive problems, resulting in higher medication costs.

4. Formulate diets based on age and size of calf: Diets should be formulated so the calf receives at least maintenance requirements for protein, vitamins, and minerals when feed consumption is 1.0 to 1.5 percent of body weight. Lightweight (350 pounds or less) and early-weaned (weaned at or before four months of age) calves may need more nutrient dense diets than larger, later-weaned calves. These lighter calves require a higher percentage of protein and a good source of digestible energy in their diets than do larger calves.

5. Be mindful of protein source: The source of protein is also critical in receiving diets. Non-protein nitrogen (urea) is not recommended in receiving diets for calves less than 600 pounds and should be avoided altogether for feeding lightweight calves. Plant protein sources such as soybean meal, cottonseed meal, and alfalfa are acceptable protein supplements for these calves.

6. Offer a good quality mineral: Providing proper mineral supplementation is an essential component of a good nutritional program for calves. Phosphorus levels are typically low on forage-based diets, so next to sodium and chloride, phosphorus is a key mineral to supplement to balance the diet. Trace minerals such as zinc and copper, along with vitamins A and E, are also important in meeting the nutritional needs of calves.

7. Place feed and water along the boundaries of pens: Calves initially walk the boundaries of their new pens searching for a way to escape. Placing feed bunks and water troughs along the fence lines of receiving pens, as opposed to in the center of the pens, increases the frequency of calves' walking past the bunks and troughs.

8. Provide adequate feed bunk and water trough space: Timid calves may not receive sufficient shares of feed if bunk space is limiting. At least 12 linear inches of bunk space per head is recommended for incoming cattle. A good guideline is to provide 18 to 24 linear inches of bunk space per calf.

9. Be consistent with feed deliveries: Feed cattle approximately the same time each day to establish a routine, consistent eating time. Twice-a-day feedings can be worthwhile the first two to three weeks of the receiving period for highly stressed, young, or lightweight cattle. Sick calves may be slow to come to the feed bunk, so it is useful to observe feeding behavior to help identify potential health problems.

Thoughts from BioZyme® Director of Nutrition & Technical Sales, Kevin Glaubius

There is a lot that producers can do from a management perspective. To be successful make a checklist of the nine bullet points above. BioZyme offers an outstanding product line for weaning including our Vita Charge® products available in seven different formulas giving you the flexibility of administering chute side or feed choice. In addition to a powerful dose of vitamins and B vitamins, Vita Charge contains AMAFERM®, a prebiotic to support the ability to recover from the effects of stress resulting in increased intake and nutrient digestion.

On arrival we recommend starting with the Vita Charge paste or drench then offer the Vita Charge Stress Tub for the first 14-28 day. The benefit of the Stress Tub is you can place these around the pen and the calves will consume them even before they find the bunks. This helps jump start appetite and mineral nutrition ensuring a successful program and gives calves a head start the first week or two over products fed in the bunks. In the bunk we recommend offering our Sure Start Pellet or Gain Smart Stocker mineral as part of the TMR, grain mix or with the mineral free choice.

Our nutritionists would be happy to assist you in formulating the right ration along with forage testing to ensure the calves are receiving the proper nutrient dense diet for a healthy Sure Start this weaning season.

New Tradition for the National Western Angus Bull Sale

For more than a century, the National Western Stock Show in Denver, has been a focal point of the U.S. cattle industry.

In celebration of that heritage, the American Angus Association will host a new evening event as part of the NWSS on Jan. 11, 2017, in the historic Stadium Arena. Activities will combine the Angus Foundation Heifer Package, the National Angus Bull Sale and live entertainment.

“Not only will Angus breeders and commercial cattlemen have a unique opportunity to purchase and merchandise breed-leading genetics, but we’re also enthused about the opportunity this event represents to bring together cattle producers from across the country in a new venue,” says David Gazda, Association regional manager and sale manager. “It’ll be a great event for Angus — one that people will really enjoy attending — in one of the industry’s great, historic settings.”

The National Angus Bull Sale is the only one managed by the member-driven organization. It begins with a show starting at 8 a.m., where a panel of judges will evaluate the entries. Kyle Gillooly, Wadley, Ga.; Andy Musgrave, Pittsfield, Ill.; and Jim Vietheer, Wilton, Calif., will place the bulls using a composite system. Prospective buyers in attendance will be invited into the showing to inspect the bulls after the grand and reserve grand champions have been selected.

Auctioneer Joe Goggins, Billings, Mont., will cry this year’s sale, which will begin in the Stadium Arena (note new location) immediately after the sale of the Angus Foundation Heifer Package at 5 p.m.

The 2016 Angus Convention Heads To Indianapolis

Cattlemen from 38 states, Canada and the United Kingdom have signed up for the 2016 Angus Convention, November 5-7, Indianapolis, IN. Wisconsin ranks in the top 10 states thus far for enrollment. Forty-five percent of participants own 1-100 head of cattle with ninety-six percent being seedstock or cow/calf producers. This national event is the world's premier gathering of cattlemen that is driving innovation and fueling leadership in the beef business. The Angus Convention is your opportunity to connect with the influential Angus cattle community of producers who are interested in producing quality beef.

From world-class education, inspiring keynote speakers, a packed trade show and plenty of entertainment, there's much excitement surrounding the American Angus Association's premier event.

If that wasn't enough — one lucky convention attendee on Monday, Nov. 7, will win a complete livestock management system. Priefert Manufacturing and Tru-Test scales are partnering to provide the Angus Convention's grand prize giveaway, says Becky Weishaar, director of Creative Media for Angus Media.

The system, worth $26,700, will include the Priefert Rough Stock Open Corral System for 35 head, with sweep; Priefert 35-foot adjustable alley; Priefert Model S04 Squeeze Chute; and Tru-Test XR5000 Indicator, HD1010 Load Bars, scale mounting brackets and XRS2 eID Stick Reader.

Angus University Headlines Convention

Continuing education and collaboration are two missions behind the American Angus Association's annual Angus Convention. Hosted this year in Indianapolis, Ind., thousands of cattle producers will gather Nov. 5-7 for three days of knowledge-building workshops, business meetings and networking. Among the convention's most popular sessions is Angus University, sponsored by Merck Animal Health.

Angus University headlines activities on Sunday, Nov. 6, and encourages cattle producers to expand their perspectives and consider what it takes to supply high-quality beef worldwide. It's a daylong discussion on the beef cattle industry's future, and how producers can creatively adapt to what that future holds.

"Angus University has been a centerpiece of the American Angus Association's annual convention for three years, and it is a day of learning and exploration for all areas of the beef business," says Becky Weishaar, Angus Media's Creative Media director and lead contact for the convention.

Angus University begins with keynote speaker Howard Putnam, former CEO for Southwest Airlines.

Members of the Indiana Angus Association will host the National Angus Tour Friday, Nov. 4, prior to the official start of the Angus Convention. Tour stops will include Willer Timber Ridge Angus in Greencastle, Stewart Select Angus in Greensburg, Coverdale Angus in Frankton and The Hoosiers Gym, built by the Knightstown Community.

Visit the convention website, www.angusconvention.com, to reserve your place and make hotel reservations for this industry-leading event.
